

Pakistan Citrus Research Institute encourages seedless kinnow cultivation

Experts from Pakistan's Citrus Research Institute Sargodha (CRIS) are urging growers to cultivate seedless kinnow varieties to compete in the international market. Pakistan's export could be increased through seedless kinnow plants, said CRIS Director Nawaz Maiken last Wednesday. He advised growers to consult with CRIS experts in order to get the best yield from their orchards, as there is a large demand for disease-free kinnow across the globe.

According to urdupoint.com, CRIS was also arranging seminars and consultative programmes for the improvement of kinnow orchards, while farmers should start to adopt modern techniques as soon as possible, he added.
